Introduction

This paper is one of a series being published to consult people on our Community Governance Review. The Review is considering the question of whether Sutton Coldfield should have a Town Council, but it is doing so as part of a much wider review of governance in the city. Please refer to Paper 1 for a full introduction to the Review and the issues we are discussing for Birmingham as a whole.

Residents in Sutton Coldfield have presented a valid petition to Birmingham City Council requesting the establishment of a new Sutton Coldfield Town Council within the existing Sutton Coldfield District and Parliamentary constituency boundaries. On 19 September 2014 Birmingham City Council resolved to carry out a Community Governance Review (CGR), including, but not restricted to, the proposals for a Sutton Coldfield Town Council.

This paper provides a summary of our initial analysis of the implications of the proposal. A more detailed report considering the key issues is available on the City Council website.

What is the role of a town council

Town and parish councils are at the heart of many communities in England. They provide neighbourhoods, villages and towns with a voice and a structure for taking local action – real people power at grassroots level. They are able to tackle specific local issues of concern and residents can work closely with their parish/town councillors to improve their locality.

Town councils work towards supporting responsiveness to community needs and interests. Their activities fall into three main categories: representing the local community; delivering services to meet local needs; striving to improve quality of life and community wellbeing.

Town councils are not tasked with statutory responsibilities relating to the provision of housing, social care, education and waste collection etc. They are a statutory cons) ~~REDCREST CO~~

A town council is not a replacement for a principal council and will not deliver complete independence and autonomy. To our knowledge there are no parish or town councils that deliver services outside the remit shown in the appendix.

While it is possible for a town council to deliver services outside these areas, there are such legal constraints, challenges and risks involved that make this unlikely on a significant scale. Furthermore, within the parameters of the roles of different types of local authorities, town councils are the most local level of government. They provide communities with a democratic voice and a structure for taking community action. Their role is not to operate as a council that would hold the budget for and deliver virtually all services provided in the locality – that is the role of the principal council.

The establishment of a town council may therefore not: involve the transfer of significant funds, services, land or other assets; give significant power over the current services provided in the areas of refuse collection and highways; give power to bypass the Planning Authority or the Birmingham's Development Plan "Birmingham Plan 2031" or create a major role, input or power in the delivery of medical, police, education or fire services.

All of the providers of these services support local delivery and welcome influence from all local residents and groups. However it would be misleading to indicate that a town council would enable an area to disengage itself from the strategic deliverers of services in its area.

The Localism Act 2011 enables relevant bodies such as voluntary and community bodies and social enterprises, employees of the authority and parish or town councils to express an interest in running a local authority service. This is called the ommunit i ht to hallen e (C8c

Neighbourhood Planning

The Localism Act 2011 also created a new process for Neighbourhood Planning, which enables parish councils as well as neighbourhood forums to work with the principal council (Planning Authority) to create a plan for their area. The plan sets out policies and priorities for the physical development of the area and must be in accordance with the Development Plan approved by the Planning Authority and the Secretary of State. Details of the process are available on the neighbourhood planning page.

What are the governance requirements of a town council?

A town council requires:

- The appointment of town councillors, from which a Chair and Vice Chair are elected (these positions can be termed Town Mayor and Deputy Town Mayor). Based on the numbers elected elsewhere, it is likely that Sutton Coldfield Town Council would require in the region of 24-32 Town Councillors, although there is no upper limit. Town Councillors may be volunteers or may be paid an allowance determined by the Town Council. These councillors would be in addition to the 12 city councillors already elected in the four wards that currently make up Sutton Coldfield District.
- A responsible finance officer.

Although not required by law, a town clerk is essential to oversee the administration of a town council and would need to be appointed.

In addition to this there are other responsibilities such as the required meetings of the council (four per year), the elections of Councillors (every four years) central administration functions (and associated posts), compliance with standing orders and financial regulations (for the supply of goods and services) and financial auditing requirements.

What are the financial implications of a town council

Town councils are funded principally through an annual precept – an additional Council Tax levied on local tax payers. The money raised locally through the precept belongs to the town council not the principal council and the town council takes decisions on how it is spent, within its legal remit.

This has always been the primary funding mechanism of town councils, as a means to deliver governance and administration related to the council and to provide additional services to enhance at a local level those already provided by the principal council.

Estimated total precept per household

At the national average of a £50 precept (for a band D property), the estimated total precept raised for Sutton Town Council would be in the region of £1.8m.

As in the case of Council Tax the precept payable by residents will vary according to the tax band of the property they live in. If a precept of £50 is set for a given year, a household in a Band D property would pay £50 whereas a household living in a Band H property, who would pay double the amount i.e. £100. On the other hand, a household in a Band B property would pay £39 (78% of £50).

Running costs

All councils have costs related to the actual functions of running a council. In the case of a town council it is considered that such costs would include democratic, management, civic and central administrative charges.

Benchmarking was undertaken against Shrewsbury Town Council, Weston-super-Mare Town Council and Lichfield City Council as a means of establishing what the level of these costs may be and what percentage of the gross expenditure this would amount to.

The costs vary considerably from £145,000 (Lichfield), £159,000 (Westonending further development in local government

• different types of local council

Local councils are the first formal tier of English local government. They are elected corporate bodies.

All parish councils have the same powers and duties (see Appendix 1). After 1974 many larger parish councils covering whole towns began calling themselves Town Councils. There is no difference in their powers, but the Chair can style themselves "Town Mayor". However because of their larger scale and therefore income they tend to have a staff and other resources that smaller local councils do not.

The 2007 Local Democracy and Public Involvement in Health Act brought in the right to set up parish councils in London for the first time. To encourage more local councils in cities generally the Towns (London) Act 2007 encouraged them to be called "high street" or "village" councils. A "village council" is also available.

They are not to be confused with Parochial Church Councils that administer the parishes of the Church of England, though they may cover the same area, particularly in rural areas.

What constitutes a function and a service

Example Planning

Section 70 (1) of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 gives powers to local planning authorities to grant or refuse planning permission where a planning application is made to the authority. The right does not allow for the function of determining planning applications to be provided by a third party. The actual decision on whether or not to grant planning permission will therefore remain with Birmingham City Council. The delivery of planning functions, for example the processing of a planning application (not the decision), may be carried out by Birmingham City Council under the provisions of the Local Government Act 2000.

Relevant authorities (e.g. Birmingham City Council) must consider an expression of interest submitted by a relevant body (to run or assist in running a service) which is in writing, within an specific time period for submission and meets other requirements for such an expression of interest (e.g. financial viability, ability to provide or assist in providing a service, how the provision or assistance will promote or improve the social, economic or environmental wellbeing of the relevant authority's area; and how it will meet the needs of the users of the relevant service).

There are various reasons why an expression of interest can be rejected, but if it is accepted, with or without modification, the authority must carry out a procurement exercise in respect of the relevant services. This must be undertaken in accordance with public procurement law in the usual way, so would be open to other bodies other than the one providing the initial expression of interest.

Authorities are also required to consider whether and how an expression of interest and any subsequent procurement exercise, can promote or improve the social, economic or environmental wellbeing of its area. This means that the City Council would need to consider the wider implications for the whole city. This is intended to encourage authorities to consider the benefits of including social benefit clauses in the delivery of the service. This is consistent with public authorities' Best Value duty and the duty in the Public Services (Social bid canote aimg

Community rights to bid

The Localism Act also enables community groups and town and parish councils to purchase assets of community value in their area. The principal council must keep a register of such assets and add to it at the request of a parish council or community group. Such assets must be used to further the social wellbeing or social interests of the community, or be capable of doing so in the future. There are various exemptions such as private homes and hotels.

When an asset on the register is proposed for sale the owner must tell the principal council and the process must be delayed for six weeks to allow community groups and town and parish councils to decide whether to bid. If they decide to do so they will have six months to find the funding and prepare a bid. This applies to private assets such as public houses and not just those in public ownership such as libraries or community centres. Further information can be found at

The Neighbourhood Planning process is as follows:

- A parish council or neighbourhood forum applies to the principal council to start the process and they will have to approve the area proposed for the plan and ensure that the areas for different plans fit together and do not overlap.
